The Funding Battle

New Dean of Academic Service for the College Mark Heinrich (L) and President Rick Rogers have the charge of leading Shelton State forward in a difficult time for education funding in Alabama

By The Courier Staff

Every day a new detail, a new wrinkle in the battle for the funding of education is spelled out and analyzed in the press. Lawsuits and threats of lawsuits abound. Gov. Don Sigelman has gotten involved.

One of the biggest, most explosive questions has been: Should K-12 education pay less than higher education of the burden for proration, if there is not enough money to pay the bills? Education is paid for in the state by tuition, grants and by revenue collected from state sales tax. When the money doesn't come in as expected then proration is called—and the schools must give up some of the funding they were expecting. It is illegal for the state to operate with deficit spending.

The universities in the state have used their political clout to advance their position that they should not take any bigger financial hit than anybody else. But what about the junior colleges, which are governed by the same school board as K-12? What is in store for Shelton

State and the 22 other community colleges when the funding mess is sorted out?

Nothing has been worked out yet. Shelton President Rick Rogers has spent several days in Montgomery recently doing whatever he could to keep Shelton on sound financial footing. "Proration is something we have to deal with every 10 years or so," Rogers said recently in an interview by the Courier. "We at Shelton State are prepared to meet the financial challenge through the use of current President Rogers said, "There has been no resolution—just a lot of activity" by the state's political and educational leaders to try to deal with the funding crisis.

This doesn't mean the college will not be hurt by the funding shortfall—whatever that amount turns out to be. In a meeting with the faculty and staff two weeks ago, Rogers said the college could cover the projected 6-plus percent expected proration though administration savings and by not doing some hiring they had budgeted for.

However, some huge percentage have been mentioned in recent news accounts. Numbers up to 19 percent have been projected for colleges if K-12 funding is protected from proration.

Heartbreak in Bay Minette

By Tom Canterbury

The Shelton State Bucs, regular season state champions and number one seed in the state tournament, lost in the finals to Southern Union by a score of 66-58 Wednesday night, March 7. Rodney Bias' 26 points and 23 rebounds were not enough to bring Shelton, who trailed for most of the second half, all the way back.

"They gambled by putting us on the free-throw line and we couldn't make enough of our shots," Dean Humphrey Lee, who attended all the games, said. "They also seemed to have more big-man depth."

In earlier tournament games, the Bucs survived a scare in the quarter-finals, defeating Enterprise State 105-102 in a barn-burner on March 5.

The Bucs then faced host-school Faulkner State in the semi-finals, winning comfortably by a score of 82-72.

Sophomores Derrick Wright and Rodney Bias were named to the all-tournament team.

The Bucs finished the season with a regular season championship and a 28-4 record, the best season in Shelton's history.

Unfortunately, there are no at large bids for the national junior college tournament. A team must win the state tournament to advance to the national competition. So Shelton will sit at home with one of the best records in the country.

Shelton will look to improve on their success this season and build towards next season. The team only losses three sophomores off of this year's team, but they are arguably the best three.

At press time, no coaches or players were available for comment.

Remembering the spring break of a lifetime

By Shirley Friday

To many spring break travelers, memories of Panama City Beach, Fla. bring visions of bright sun, tanned skin, cold beer, thumping music, and non-stop dancing. The spring of 1991 brought all of those things for Tammy Wilburn's life and more—her last dance with her father.

Two weeks before spring break, Tammy's father, Jim Wilburn, was diagnosed with lung cancer.

"Most college students wouldn't dream of bringing their dad, but I couldn't go without him," Wilburn said.

Once at the beach, the two, along with other family members, enjoyed watching everybody party. Beer funnelling, beach games, water sports, etc... Wilburn was even coaxed into a bikini contest at the Spinnaker Club where she placed second.

But, she says, all that paled in comparison to what took place in the parking lot one night after dinner.

"We were playing my Dad's favorite music," Wilburn said, "and when we pulled into the hotel parking lot, we weren't finished listening." The family got out of their vehicles, turned the music up and danced-right in the parking lot, under the stars."

That was the last time Wilburn danced with her dad. He died a few months later, but he never stopped mentioning "the dance" she says.

"Keep Looking Up!"

By Dr. Lee Albritton

The First Rock from the Sun

Mercury—our Solar System's first planet from the Sun—is hard to observe because it will always be close to the Sun from our view on Earth! The middle week of March will be an excellent opportunity to observe this elusive planet, but you will have to be an early riser, for Mercury is in the morning sky just before sunrise!

If you are up and going about 5:30 am starting on March the 11th and for the following week, simply take a look above the eastern horizon before sunrise and you will see a fairly bright object that doesn't twinkle—Mercury! On March 11th, Mercury will be at its largest angle west of the Sun, 27 degrees, from Earth's view. This configuration is officially referred to as Mercury's Greatest Western Elongation.

Since Mercury is the first planet, it has a very short orbit around the Sun, and therefore, it completes a revolution of the Sun in a short period of time.

Ancient astronomers noted that this planet changed positions in the sky in a short period of time and that is why they named this planet for the messenger of the gods—Mercury! Remember that the god Mercury had wings on his helmet and on his sandals, so that he could fly!

Keep looking up, get out of bed early one morning before sunrise, and enjoy the "first rock from the Sun"—Mercury!

He's America's Renaissance Man. And now Steve Martin is bringing his multi-talents to the realm of fiction. With his new novella Shopgirl, Martin explores matters of the heart as he brings Mirabelle (the title character), a clerk at the Neiman Marcus glove counter ("selling things that nobody buys anymore") into a relationship with Roy Porter, a wealthy business type who's more than twice her age for results that are both funny and heart-breaking.

Harley Altmeyer wishes he were off at college living the high life. Instead, at the beginning of Tawni O'Dell's new book Back Roads, he's stuck in the backwoods of Pennsylvania's mining country taking care of his three unruly younger sisters. Family secrets and unspoken truths collide as well as staggering surprises in O'Dell's first novel.

In Jupiter's Bones, Faye Kellerman's latest thriller, Dr. Emil Ganz, internationally noted astrophysicist, suddenly disappears without a trace. Ten years later, he reemerges as Father Jupiter the leader of a pseudoscientific cult. For fifteen years, Ganz rules his hundreds of followers with an iron rod. Until he's found dead next to a fifth of vodka and a handful of pills. ties for local K-12 schools and Shelton has been put between a very hard rock and a very hard other place. "I would hope the courts would not put us in a position of playing Solomon," Ray told reporters.

Indeed, the only way to pretend to try and make both sides happy is to make out like you are going to have to kill both your babies: K-12 and higher education. Will a good mother jump up and say, No?

Students at Shelton, along with other observers of the political-educational scene speculate that Gov. Siegelman is promoting the unthinkable in an effort to revive the idea of an education lottery. However, others point out that the lottery was never designed to pay for basic expenses, only for scholarships and other special funding.

A poll of Shelton students indicated some confusion over how education is paid for in the state. Only half of the students polled chose state sales tax when given a list of three and "other." That means half didn't realize that when the funds are not coming in as projected there is bound to be a serious problem.

The students are knowledgeable enough to be concerned, though. At least 77 percent of the students polled said they were somewhat or very alarmed by the current funding situation.

Interestingly, the students seemed to sympathize with students and educators from K-12. Right at half of the students indicated they believe we are all in this together and both K-12 and higher education should be prorated the same, if the cutbacks have to come. An equal percentage of students—both roughly 25 percent—said more cutbacks should come from one or the other segment of education.

President Rogers has been meeting with officials in the state trying to tackle this thorny problem. "Two-year college presidents have been working to ensure that funding for our colleges remain at a satisfactory level," Rogers said.

However as the state heads into spring break nothing has been taken care of, and the prospects are not promising. "There has been no resolution—just a lot of activity," is how Rogers expressed it.

Battling for funding? President Rick Rogers battled Derrick Spencer in the Buccaneer Free Throws for Free Tuition Contest. Rogers won the battle with four of 10 shots made, but he magnanimously granted the scholarship anyway

Courier Student Poll

50% of Shelton students are aware that education is funded by state sales tax; 40% of students thought education is funded by income tax; 10% of students thought education was funded by a permanent endowment fund.

44% of Shelton students are somewhat alarmed by the funding of state colleges in Alabama; 33% of students are very alarmed by the funding situation 12% of students are not at all alarmed; and 7% are a little alarmed

51% of Shelton students believe that K-12 education should pay the same proration as higher education; 25% of Shelton students believe K-12 education should pay more proration; 24% of students believe K-12 education should pay less.

The Courier poll was conducted with 54 randomly selected students.

Lady Bucs fall short of their title hopes

By Tom Canterbury

As the Alabama state women's basketball finals were tipping-off in Muscle Shoals, the Shelton State Lady Bucs were unloading their bus in Tuscaloosa. Shelton, the defending champions, lost in the semi-finals Saturday, March 10, to Calhoun State by a score of 50-47.

"With Calhoun, Northwest-Shoals and us anything can happen," head coach Madonna Thompson said. "We didn't shoot well and we went 11 for 22 from the free throw line and we just got beat."

Shelton led by 9 at half time and did not trail until the 6 minute mark when Calhoun took the lead and never trailed again.

"We got a little scared of the big game atmosphere and could not make a shot when we needed it," Thompson said.

In the quarterfinals, the Lady Bucs defeated Alabama Southern in comfortable fashion by a final score of 77-62.

Shelton finishes the season with a 19-11 record, and had a 9 game winning streak until the loss against Calhoun.

The Lady Bucs lose four starters off the team and will look to rebuild next year. But there is hope for Coach Thompson and the Lady Bucs. All of the freshman on this year's team received significant playing time, especially LaTonya Henry, who started almost every game and often led Shelton in scoring and rebounding. Although the loss of players with the talent and leadership abilities of Erica Edwards, Natisha Hardrick, Summer King and Bridgett Waters will be felt, Henry, Kanetra Owens, Carol McDonald and Kaleta Conwell will be here to captain the ship. If these sophomores to be can gel with and lead the incoming freshman, it may soon be said the Lady Bucs are not rebuilding; they're reloading.

High winds and high scores in Panama City

By Tom Canterbury

The Shelton State golf team battled 20-25 mph winds on their way to a third place finish out of eight teams in the Hubert Green Invitational at the Hombre Golf Club in Panama City March 4-6.

"I felt that even if we didn't play good the whole time we played hard," head coach Matt Terry said. "Our effort was a positive, our scores were a negative."

Most of the team members' scores were in the 80s in both rounds of the tournament. Bright spots for the team were Adam Harris who shot 74-79, good enough for second place and Jason Davidson who shot 78-78 finishing fifth in the individual competition.

"Hombre is a tough

course when the conditions are bad," Terry said. "Still, there is a way to get around a tough course and we just made too many mistakes."

The team travelled to Muscle Shoals on March 10 for the University of North Alabama's tournament. Shelton is competing with around 18 teams, mostly 4-year schools, at Cypress Lakes Golf Club.

"You're going to see a different team this week," the fiery Terry said.

Shelton travels to Cullman for the Wallace State Invitational March 20-22 and then they go to Dadeville on March 29-April 1.

"I know they have what it takes, it's just a matter of them knowing," Terry said.

Shelton baseball off and running; softball team surprising themselves

By Tom Canterbury

The nationally ranked Buccaneer baseball team has enjoyed a successful pre-conference season. The team has posted an 8-4 record over an out-of-conference schedule that included a week-long road trip into Florida and visits from teams as far away as Missouri.

"I told the team before the season started that we could be 0-13 before conference because all the teams we play are pretty good," head coach Bobby Sprowl said. "But we're 8-4 and that surprises me but at the same time it doesn't because we've gone out there and played well."

Shelton finished off their pre-conference schedule March 11 at home against Jeff State. They then begin conference play Tuesday March 13 at Gadsden State.

Sprowl was hesitant to cite individual leaders, instead saying that everyone was contributing to the teams good start. He did however mention a few individuals.

"[Infielder] Jared Walker, [outfielder] Scott Rachlin and [firstbaseman] Griff Israel have done a good job of leading."

Shelton's high pre-season game, win in your conference and still have a chance. We're focusing on getting in the tournament and playing well in it."

Next-door, the Shelton fast-pitch softball team is having their own fast start. The Lady Bucs own a 7-5 record and are in the midst of a 4 game winning streak.

The highlight of the season so far was a double-header home sweep of Wallace-Hanceville on March 8. Shelton won both games in their last at bat by scores of 6-5 in 8 innings and 3-2. Amy Ballard had the game winning RBI in game 1 and Selena Rester got the complete game win. In game 2, Erin Phillips drove in the game winner and was the winning pitcher.

"This is so great because we played these guys in the fall and could not beat them," head coach Dixie Terry said. "My girls didn't think they could win and this shows them that they can."

Shelton then continued their winning ways on March 10 with a convincing sweep of Beville-Fayette by scores of 7-0 and 13-4.

"I couldn't be prouder of my girls," Terry said.

Umphrey now a really big name around Shelton

Tom Umphrey was a big name around Shelton State for many years, beginning as an administrator in the early '80s until he is retirement as president last fall.

But at the Buccaneers last home game on Feb. 24 the name Umphrey became, literally, huge, when the former president and his first lady, Kay, were honored with the naming of the college's athletic center.

Current president Rick Rogers emceed the event between the basketball games. He cited the Umphreys for their unceasing and creative support of the college, which includes the leadership in building the new Martin Campus.

Dr. Cordell Wynn leads a large, enthusiastic crowd in a special Fellowship Breakfast

The Cafetorium on the C.A. Fredd Campus of Shelton State was full Feb. 23 when Special Assistant to the President Dr. Cordell Wynn lead a special tribute to Black History Month during the college's annual Fellowship Breakfast.

In a relaxed warm and often humorous manner, Wynn brought on speakers and performers who delighted the crowd. One speaker who seemed to be particularly affecting was C.A. Fredd Jr. who paid tribute to his late father, the founder of C.A. Fredd College, whose faith and unflagging work for education inspired generations of students.

The well-fed crowd was very vocal in their appreciation of the music of Dr. Roderick George, of the Stillman College music faculty, who sang two Negro spirituals—"At the Feet of Jesus" and "Ride Up in the Chariot." He was accompanied by Dr. Phillip Todd Westgate.

McGinnis and Moss take first in NATS Auditions

Gretchen McGinis won first place in the sophomore women's category of the National Association of Teachers of Singing (NATS) State auditions held in Mobile Feb. 23-24. McGinnis, a voice major studies with Glinda Blackshear.

Cecily Houston Moss took first in the lower-level adult women's category. She is a voice major studying with Dr. Mark Brown.

Mary Kathryn Perkins and Jacob

Austell, also students of Blackshear, were selected as semi-finalists.

Shelton is the only community college in the state that sends students to the NATS Auditions. More than 200 students participated.

Other Shelton voice students participating were Melanie McDaniel, Jennifer Huggins, Pat Richetto, Alexis Wilkinson, Tyler Jolly, Peter Fowler, Jonathan King, CeRone Sullivan, and Chris Miller.

Do you want to take this outside!?

Theatre Tuscaloosa's second-stage production of Eric Bogosian's Suburbia adds new elements for all involved

According to the mission statement of Theatre Tuscaloosa's Second Stage, the program's purpose is to give young directors and actors a chance to hone their skills with an alternative play that may not be profitable on a main stage. Plays may also be performed in atypical spaces and not necessarily on a stage at all. This March's production of Suburbia provides all these elements and more.

Set in the back alley of a convenience store in the mythical, middle-American town of Burnfield, Eric Bogosian's Suburbia follows the twists and turns in the lives of eight young people not unlike ourselves. Over the course of a single spring night, some of the group have found their way out to bigger and better things while the rest are left to deal with an unexpected tragedy that could have happened to any of them.

Presented outside in the parking lot behind the Bean-Brown Theatre, Suburbia is making a departure from the normal proscenium setting found in most Theatre Tuscaloosa shows in order to capture the essence of the story in a more modern and realistic setting.

The set is minimal, utilizing the actual elements provided by the location such as the dumpster, roll up door and porch outside the theatre. These elements are combined with standard theatrical scenery and visual elements provided by the actors themselves to make the area more interesting.

Shelton State theatre student Michael Sullivan is directing and also acting in the show along with Shelton students Thomas Canterbury, Russell Frost and Janet Hernandez.

"This is the most fun I've ever had in a show," said Canterbury, who plays the womanizing, fun-loving Buff. "Buff is so different from me; it is a tremendous release."

All the actors are working exceptionally hard in order to get the show ready for production. Hampered by time restraints due to several members of the cast participating in Shelton's previous production of They Dance Real Slow in Jackson, time has been short causing many members of the cast to spend as much time preparing out of rehearsal as in rehearsal.

"When I decided to become involved in the show I knew that we would only have 23 days to get it ready," Frost said. "So I took it as a challenge and I'd have to say that so far I haven't been disappointed."

The show is a dramatic comedy dealing with a wide range of issues such as racism, drug abuse, jealousy and love. It is an opportunity for young actors to showcase their talents by playing a character approximately their own age and in one instance, ethnicity. Janet Hernandez, who is originally from Mexico, plays Norma the store owner who deals directly with racism.

Due to strong language and mature content, Suburbia is not a show for the faint of heart. Parental discretion is strongly advised.

"The f-word is thrown about like beads at Mardi Gras," Sullivan said.

"It's no worse than most movies nowadays. It adds to the realism of the play," Canterbury said. "If I thought the language was excessive I wouldn't have auditioned."

Opening night for Suburbia will be Wednesday March 21 at 7:30 p.m. The run will continue each night at 7:30 through Saturday, March 24. For more information call the Theatre Tuscaloosa box office at 391-2277.

Stars descend on Shelton once more

It's that time of year again. The third annual Alabama Stage and Screen Hall of Fame Induction ceremony is set for March 16 and this year promises to be the most exciting ever. This year's inductees include world-renowned author Truman Capote, Broadway star Rebecca Luker and a special honor for the movie To Kill A Mockingbird.

Luker herself will be attending as well as Academy Award nominee Mary Badham and Philip Alford who played 'Scout' and 'Jim' in Mockingbird. Rick Journey from Fox 6 News will be hosting the event. There will also be performances by a group of Tuscaloosa's finest actors and singers.

The highlight of the night will be the post-induction dance and dinner gala in the atrium. Everyone in attendance will have a chance to mingle with the stars and enjoy the atmosphere.

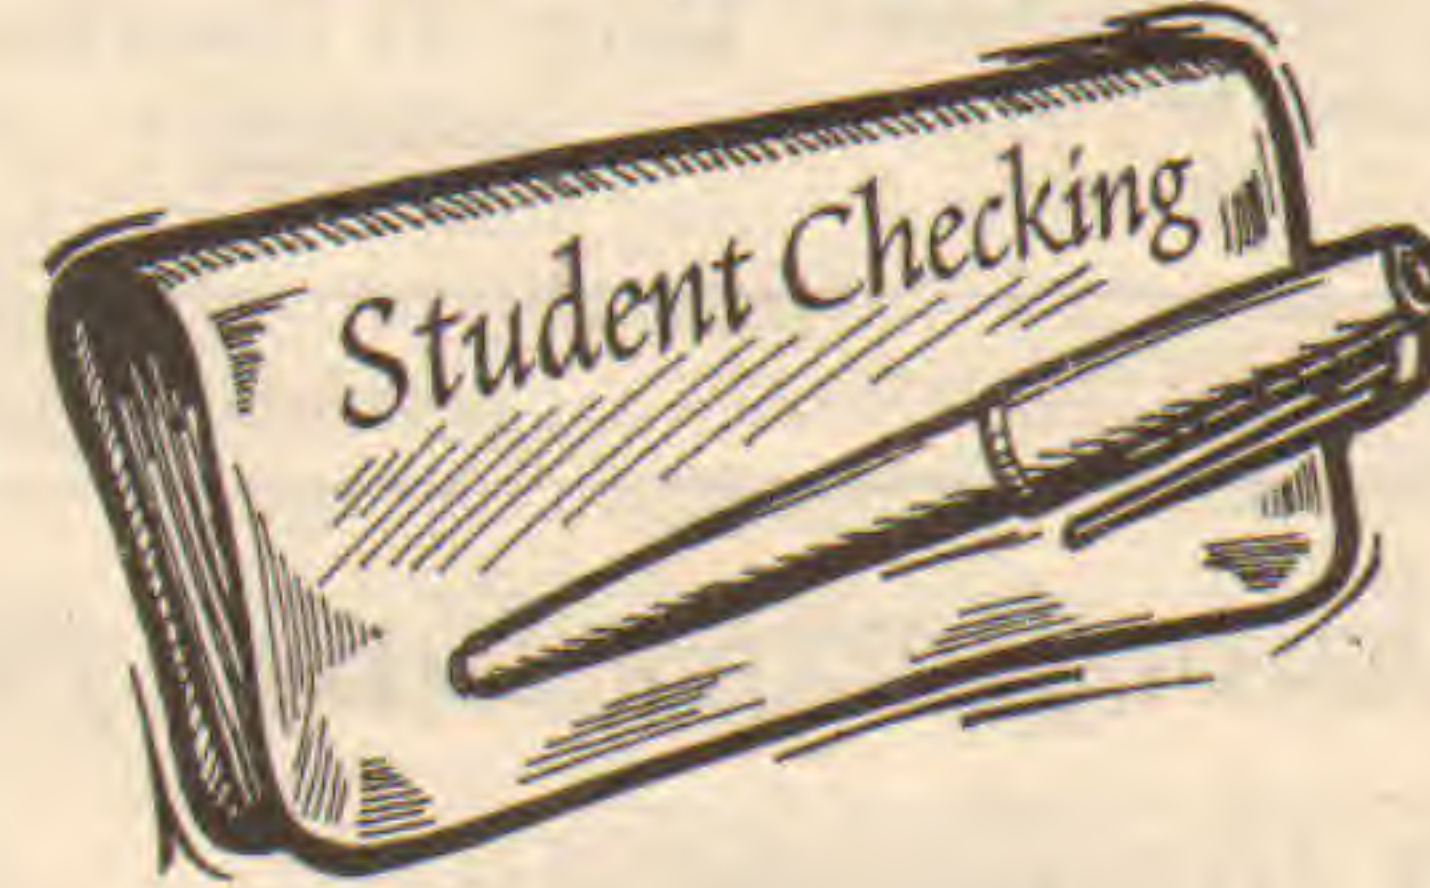

"The gala was the highlight of my year last year and I expect it to be even more exciting this year," theatre student Russell Frost said.

Ticket prices are $100 and need to be ordered in advance. Call the Theatre Tuscaloosa box office at 391-2277 for more information. The gala is a "black tie" event.

Shelton offers new on-line health class

This summer, Susan Saylor will offer, for the first time, Personal Health (HED221) on-line.

Personal Health is a survey course for the freshman or sophomore student; there are no prerequisites for this course.

The course covers various health topics, such as stress, mental health, physical fitness, nutrition, and responsible sexuality. The goal of the course is not only to teach about personal health topics, but also to assist the student in making individual assessments of health risks and demonstrate how one can reduce those risks through increased knowledge and certain behavior changes.

Saylor's new course is the second on-line class offered at SSCC. Biology 101 is still being offered via the Internet. The enrollment has grown since its initial offering from one class of eight students to two sections with 30 in each section.

Students encouraged to apply for Honor's Night awards

On Honor's Night, Thursday, May 3, Shelton will recognize the college's outstanding students.

Three of the most prestigious awards are the Outstanding Freshman Award, the Harold I. James Outstanding Technical Student Award and the Leo Sumner Outstanding Sophomore Student Award. Applications for these

Foundation scholarship deadline set for March 15

The Shelton State Foundation is offering a variety of scholarship for the summer 2001, fall 2001 and spring 2002 semesters. More than $27,000 will be awarded to deserving students.

Applications are available in the Counseling Center and in the main office on the Fredd campus.

Scholarships available are the: Abrasley-Shelton, Accounting, Alexander Adult Studies, Cecilia Ashton Memorial, Larry Black memorial, Wayne

Boetler, Compass Bank, Construction, Moses Day, C.A. Fredd Sr. Endowed, B.F. Goodrich Employees Federal Credit Union, Harold James Technical, McAbee/Southern Heat Exchanger, Carla Mathews, Clyde Price, Cleny Renfroe, Speech-Fine Arts, Dr. and Mrs. John Todd Endowed, Tuscaloosa Teachers Credit Union, Thomas and Kay Umphrey Presidential and West Alabama Health Council.

However, Internet courses are not for everyone. Take the Is-Distance-Learning-For-Me? Quiz to see if you are a "good fit" for Distance Learning.

The Is-Distance-Learning-for-Me?-Quiz

1. My need to have this course now is:

- a. High—I need it immediately for degree, job, or other important reasons
- b. Moderate—I could take it on campus later or substitute another course
- c. Low—It's a personal interest that could be postponed

2. Feeling that I am part of a class is:

- a. Not particularly necessary to me
- b. Somewhat important to me
- c. Very important to me

3. I would classify myself as someone who:

- a. Often gets things done ahead of time
- b. Needs reminding to get things done on time
- c. Puts things off until the last minute

4. Classroom discussion is:

- a. Rarely helpful to me
- b. Sometimes helpful to me
- c. Almost always helpful to me

5. When an instructor hands out directions for an assignment, I prefer:

- a. Figuring out the instructions for myself
- b. Trying to follow the directions on my own, then asking for help as needed,
- c. Having the instructions explained to me

6. I need faculty comments on my assignments:

- a. Within a few weeks, so I can review what I did
- b. Within a few days, or I forget what I did
- c. Right away, or I get very frustrated

7. Considering my professional and personal schedule, the amount of time I have to work on a distance learning course is:

- a. More than enough for a campus class or a distance learning class.
- b. The same as for a class on campus
- c. Less than for a class on campus

8. When I am asked to use VCRs, computers, or other technologies new to me:

- a. I look forward to learning new skills.
- b. I feel apprehensive, but try anyway
- c. I put it off or try to avoid it

9. As a reader, I would classify myself as:

- a. Good—I usually understand the text without help
- b. Average—I sometimes need help to understand the text
- c. Slower than average

10. If I have to go to campus to take exams or complete work:

- a. I can go to campus anytime
- b. I may miss some lab assignments or exam deadlines if campus labs are not open evenings and weekends
- c. I will have difficulty getting to campus, even in the evenings and on weekends

SCORING:

Add 3 points for each "a" that you marked, 2 points for each "b", and 1 point for each "c" response. If you scored 20 or over, a distance learning class is a real possibility for you.

If you scored between 11 and 20, distance learning classes may work for you, but you may need to make a few adjustments in your schedule and study habits to succeed. I

If you scored 10 or below, distance learning courses may not currently be the best alternative for you. Talk to your faculty advisor.
